Not illustrated. 1914 Excerpt: .it acts as a deoclorizing and bleaching agent and has been found to be of great importance for these purposes. On account of its Calcium Magnesium and Phosphate contents and on account of the organic tissue being destroyed, it is in a perfect condition to be used as a soil corrector and Humus producer. Besides the above named there are other products which we refrain from mentioning as they are trade secrets. All this data demonstrate that the products manufactured in connection with this hitherto not developed industry, are of such a nature that they not only come up to the requirements, but are renumerative to the manufacturer at the same time. After the various Potash salts have been removed from the liquor by fractional crystallization, there is a liquor remaining called the last mother liquor. Iodine salts are considerably more soluble than those first mentioned, and we find the Iodine in this last mother liquor wherefrom it can be obtained, by several chemical reactions and also by the more advanced and better system of Electrolysis. According to John S. Burd, there can be obtained from each ton of dried Kelp, 4 lbs. of Iodine, but with our experience and with our improved methods of handling and machinery, we are able to obtain 6 lbs. of Iodine per ton of dried Kelp, at a minimum price of $3.00. Sonstadt says that in one ton of sea water there is 42 grains of Iodine, and to...
